

Conclusion

Oberkirchenrat Dr. Ulrich Möller

Thank you so much Listeners Group! And thank you for challenging us – also especially via the last requests and challenges of the younger generation. I think we have homework there to do.

You as members of the Listeners Group enriched us and gifted us once again to taste something of the special wealth which God is sharing from his love with us through his spirit because this is a spirit of diversity. We have been strengthened with fresh new perspectives which we shared with one another from various context living situations and perspectives of privilege, of underprivilege, of majority, of discriminated minorities. And we could experience.

Indeed God is transforming us through his unconditional love. And he is equipping us with what we need on this way of self-transformation being transformed through his spirit and becoming instruments of the transformative power of God's love reaching out to all. And he is equipping us with what we need for this journey. We don't walk alone! And that helped us to find new perspectives of delivering and empowering love. They are still in front of us to be discovered in this journey together. Because it's imperative in it's relevant for God's mission today.

Thank all of you for sharing your rich gifts and insides and perspectives!

Rev Barry Hughes from Scotland, Bishop Dr Mbilu from Tanzania, Conference Minister David Long-Higgins from the United States – they will be your and our personal messengers of this conference at the General Synod of the Evangelical Church of Westphalia starting on Sunday. They are there to make sure, that your insights and perspectives are being included into our Synod's discussion and on mission today.

We invite you after the blessings we are receiving at the end of this conference to further inspire each other with your possibilities of meeting on the platform which is opened to you the entire day to take the chance of meeting each other, be in personal one-to-one meetings you can arrange or be in it at the lounge-tables and also to use the opportunity to straw through the exhibition booths of the workshops. Please, let you be further inspired of the many fold impulses you can find there. And as we said you can also download the contributions which have been made during the conference there.

We promise you, once we have recovered a bit from the stress of preparing and executing this conference and the upcoming General Synod of the Evangelical Church of Westphalia, we will come back to you. Our common journey after this conference has just started.

May God help us to make this mission of His as diverse and inclusive as God loves, embraces all of his creatures and his human beings! May He open our eyes, where we have to see a new what sharing power with all generations of whatever background, in all the diversity of God's world may need as balances and rebalancing as we have heard at the end of the conference.

With this I have over now. With once again thanking all of you and all of those who have worked for this conference in the background, that it was possible to come to such a Pentecostal experience, which is not our making, but the making of the Holy Spirit itself who is the One to inspire us and to give us the long breath we need for the journey in his mission to bring his love as empowerment for life for all to all mankind.

Thank you for all!
